C. C. BARTON, ADELPHI NATIVE, SHOOTS SELF

Son of Dr. H. G. Barton, Well Known Adelphia Man, Dies in Cleveland

WAS STATE AGENT

Survived By Wife, Six Children

The body of C. C. Barton, 40, of Sidney, who committed suicide in a Cleveland hotel following his dismissal as a state prohibition agent, will be brought to the Albaugh Co. funeral home here Thursday to later be taken to the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Barton in Adelphi, where funeral services will be held.

Mr. Barton was a native of Adelphi and besides his parents is survived by the following brothers and sisters: William, principal of Bainbridge high school; Robert, superintendent of Monroe-twp high school, this county; John G., superintendent of Muhlenberg-twp school, this county; Miss Alice, a teacher in the Saltcreek-twp high school; Mrs. Ruth Minshall, a teacher in the Adelphi school; Mrs. Margaret Good of Adelphi, and Mrs. Clara Bookwalter of near Hallsville.

WIFE, 6 CHILDREN

Besides his parents, brothers and sisters, he is survived by his widow, who was a daughter of David Holderman of Adelphi, and six children.

Mr. Barton had a long career as an educator before becoming connected with the state prohibition department. He also served in the state department under Governor James Cox in 1920 and 1921.

Following is the account of Mr. Barton's death and the conditions leading to it taken from the Thursday issue of the Ohio State Journal:

After writing a five-page letter charging "scandal" in the state prohibition department, C .C. Barton of Sidney, O., who was dismissed recently as a state prohibition inspector, committed suicide Wednesday in the Hotel Cleveland, in Cleveland, by shooting.

NO STATE INQUIRY

Almost immediately upon receipt of the news, E. G. Mathews, state prohibition commissioner, conferred with Governor White as to whether the state should make an investigation into the suicide. Following the conference, Mathews announced no investigation would be made and that any charges Barton might have made in the letter "would only be those of a disgruntled employe."

The letter purporting to relate prohibition department "scandals" was turned over to Cuyahoga County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller by Coroner A. J. Pearse. Neither

THREE ITALIANS HUNTED AFTER BOMB BLAST IS FATAL TO TWO

Alertness of Easton, Pa., Post Office Clerk Prevents Packages From Going to Destination But Pays With Life and That of Fellow-worker.

EASTON, Pa., Dec. 31—Three men in a small coupe bearing a New York license plate were trailed today by a concentrated army of secret service men and police as perpetrators of a widespread bomb-plot, presumably anti-fascist in nature.

The alertness of a local postal clerk, who with another lost his life after six dynamite-laden packages had been mailed here addressed to prominent men in New York, Baltimore, Pittsburg and Huntington, Pa., alone averted a series of tragedies, police believed.

SENT TO CONSULS

Addressed to Italian consuls, publishers and others, the packages were posted here by two men believed to have been Italians. The Rev. P. T. Stengele who had watched them address the infernal machines in the post-office, furnished a good description of the pair.

Two of the men in the coupe were said by those observing it here and a man in Phillipsburg, N. J., through which it passed later, to resemble the description given by the Rev. Stengele of the plotters.

Charles V. Weaver, explosive expert, who after the first package had been opened by the clerk in the post office where it exploded, killing him and his compainion and wrecking the front of the post office building, was hovering between life and death today.

He was probably fatally hurt when he removed the infernal machines to a vacant lot to detonate them, and one exploded as he bent over it.

The dead clerks were Edward Werkheiser, 28, and John House, 50.

Two other clerks, Arlington Albert and Clarence Keller, were painfully but not critically hurt.

AROUSED CURIOSITY

Werkheiser's curiosity was aroused by the fact that six packages of the same size were labeled as containing various objects, such as desk sets and perfumes.

He opened one addressed to J. Everhardt, Huntington, Pa., an official of a reform school there. With a roar, the bomb exploded.

One of the remaining bombs were addressed to Generoso Pope, wealthy New York publisher of Italian language newspapers, and sand and gravel contractor whom the Hofstarter legislative committee subpoenaed for questioning.

Commission of Six Members Sought

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 31.—The lid was lifted today from the state highway department.

Reporting the results of months of investigation, reams of testimony and a mountainous accumulation of facts, figures and evidence, the state senate highway investigating committee emerged today with a recommendation to Governor George White that a commission of six be created to cure the ills that have subjected the department "to political and commercial influences detrimental to the public interest."

FIND RESULTS

While finding alleged irregularities in department purchases, an "inadequate administrative organization," and "waste and carelessness," and delicately suggesting various points for possible grand jury investigation and matters for possible suit or prosecution, the committee recommended the foundation of the six-man highway commission to accomplish the following results:

1. Remove political and commercial influence from the state highway department;
2. Stabilize State Highway policies and insure proper expenditure of State Highway funds;
3. Attract outstanding men of the highway profession to the executive staff of the department;
4. Assure these men of tenure of office free from political interference;
5. An organization of administrative function, so that responsibilities are definitely defined and properly distributed to insure efficient operation of the department.

SIX MEMBERS

The commission proposed by the senate committee would be comprised of six members, all of the same political party, with each member holding a six-year term of office with not more than two members going out of office during the two-year terms of any governor.

The members of the commission would be paid a small salary not to exceed approximately $2,000 a year and expenses and permanent headquarters for the commission would be established in Columbus.

Among other things, the commission would appoint the director of highways, fix his salary, approve or revise the budget for the department prepared by the director, determine programs of improvement, pass on all plans and projects submitted by the director, let all contracts, approve all changes in the state highway system, determine the allocation of state highway improvement funds and establish the general highway policies for the department.

Former Praised Hoover and Policies Through Trying 1931 Crisis

SAYS U. S. READY

Believes Nation Through the Depression

BY SENATOR SIMEON D. FESS
Republican National Chairman.
Written for International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The nation passes from 1931, its great resources intact, its national credit unimpaired, its faith in the future undismayed, and facing better times in 1932.

The record of the Hoover administration during this year of tribulation is one to challenge the respect of any man. Governments have crumbled, commerce has lagged, unemployment has grown throughout the world, yet America is ready, prepared, equipped to go forward to greater prosperity than any yet experienced. We owe this to the able, intelligent, kindly leadership of Herbert Hoover.

REVIEWS YEAR

A review of the year reveals the ability of Hoover's leadership. In every other crisis where unemployment and suffering have resulted, no general effort ever was undertaken for relief. Charitable agencies were left to struggle with local problems in each community. How different was the Hoover method. Before the problem became acute, he summoned the business leaders of the nation to his side, regardless of politics, religion or creed, and organized them into a national group to establish a nation-wide system for relieving the needs of the unemployed. He met the call of humanity in that crisis.

This undertaking saved the nation from the dole, which has bankrupt England.

Former Democratic Chairman Says Americans Show Confidence

PARTY AT PEAK

Blames Republican for Delaying Program

BY SENATOR CORDELL HULL
Former Democratic National

Written for International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Democratic party emerges from the year 1931 with the confidence of the American people.

In this year of travail, suffering, depression, unemployment and actual want, the people have turned to the party of Jefferson, Jackson and Wilson to lead them out of their wilderness of despair. They have elected a Democratic House of Representatives, given us almost control of the Senate, and chosen Democratic governors in a majority of the states.

FORECASTS VICTORY

In 1932, by overwhelming majorities, the Democrats will return to power, just as the people turned to Democracy in 1912 to rid the government of entrenched special privilege and in 1916 when the nation faced a world crisis. That will be the story of 1932—a disillusioned people turning back to Democracy to rid the government of special privilege and rescue the nation from a world crisis.

The year 1931 has revealed as few other years the subservience of the Republican party and its national administration to the wishes of privileged interests. The plight of the people has gone unheeded. Their cries for aid have fallen upon deaf ears or upon ears acutely atuned to the whispers of foreign governments.

Leader of Progressive Says Hoover's Administration is Failure

'RICH ARE RICHER'

Fails in Promise to Farmers, He Claims

By SENATOR GEORGE NORRIS
Leader of the Senate Progressives

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—The Hoover administration has been a bitter disappointment during the last year to the American people. It has opened the eyes of those who supported President Hoover on the theory and in the belief that he was fundamentally progressive.

The year has demonstrated he was not the superman the thought that he believes in and belongs to the group that believes in the thoroughly discredited political philosophy that the government should be conducted for the benefit of those who already own the wealth of the country at the expense of the toiling masses.

RAPS HOOVER

Every promise of prosperity made by President Hoover has been proven by events to be false. Under his rule, the rich have grown richer and the poor have grown poorer. Now he refuses to give his support to any practical method by which suffering humanity may be relieved.

The greatest victory he claims for himself in reality means the forgiving of debts, which European nations owe us, while millions of toiling Americans sacrifice to raise the money to pay the interest and principal of the funds we borrowed to lend to Europe. His heart seems to respond to suffering in Europe while the president's eyes are blind when it comes to relieving the hardships of millions of Americans.

Part Of Barton's "Note" Is Made Public Today

CLEVELAND, Dec 31.—Regarded by the Cuyahoga-co prosecutor's office as injurious to the character of the men involved, part of a "for publication" suicide letter, left by Clint C Barton, discharged state prohibition agent before he took his own life in a downtown Cleveland hotel, today was withheld from public scrutiny.

Three pages of the five-page note, written in long hand on hotel stationary, charged that five dry raiding acquaintances of Barton framed him in connection with drinking parties staged in Columbus hotels

READ STORY

Barton dismissed as a prohibition agent on Dec 18, wrote the note immediately after he read a newspaper story containing the refusal of Governor George White to intercede in behalf of the discharged agent After placing the note on his hotel room dresser marking it for publication," Barton fired two shots through his heart

The part of the letter released follows

"Relative to the party at Hotel Hayes in Columbus, O.

"The true story of what happened at Hotel Fort Hayes follows.

"—brought in a gallon of brandy from his home in St. Clairsville, O. I was invited to the room of —of Nelsonville, O., where one quart was brought in by—and was drunk by —, —, —, —, and myself

TOLD OF GIRLS

"Later—came into my room with another quart and two Columbus girls came in and had some drinks Later in the evening — —, — together with — came to my room

This concluded the party The entire gang double-crossed me and placed me in the light of being the guilty party I did not furnish a drop of liquor at any time during the evening

'Mr Mathews received an anonymous note about the party a week later and set the hearing for the 18th of December at 10 o'clock — came into my room on the morning of the 18th and wished to know what was to be told. I said, 'Tell the truth'

'I had a bottle containing some liquor and offered him a drink. He at once left my room and went to the office and reported that I had liquor in my room.

"Mr. Mathews came down to the hotel and upon finding the bottle, told me I was fired. I went to the office and requested to be permitted to sit in on the hearing. Mathews told me I was excused from the hearing I left the room, and after the boys had recited their stories I was invited back.

"—began a story of how he came up to my room and saw the girls present I immediately requested that he begin from the start and tell the whole story

"Mathews told me to shut my mouth, he was conducting the hearing — continued and placed all the blame on me, which was acquiesced in by all others present Mathews at all times appeared to make me the guilty party and seemed very anxious to do so

'This is the truth, the whole truth as I may answer to God—which I am going to do."

Informed of the allegations made by Barton, Commissioner Mathews declared "I can't take Barton's charges seriously They are those of a disgruntled employe."

CONVENTION OF REPUBLICANS AID CHICAGO BY 10 MILLIONS

CHICAGO. — When the Republican national convention is held here in June, local business will be benefitted to the extent of $10,000,000, according to the estimate of John L Coyne, vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Approximately this sum will be spent in preparation for the convention and by the thousands of persons who will be attracted here by the party meeting, Coyne said. The number of visitors has been calculated at 75,000.

"We believe," Coyne told International News Service, "that from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 will be spent by the visitors in spite of the low hotel rates for the delegates and other official visitors will be reduced, railroad fares will be reduced to fare and a half for the round trip, and other expenses will be kept as usual levels.

"All lines of business will benefit, because the visitors will spend their money for local transportation, telephones, amusements, and in the retail stores and restaurants."

The convention delegates, incidental to the business of picking a presidential nominee, will make the first official inspection of the 1933 World's Fair grounds. A preview of the Century Progress is being specially arranged

Since 1920, when the Republican national convention was last held here, hotel facilities in and near the loop have been increased immeasurably, according to J K. Blatchford, secretary of the Chicago Hotel association.

"Since that time," he said, "the new Stevens hotel, the Palmer House, the Bismarck and the Drake have been built. Besides, there have been large additions to the Sherman and the Morrison. All this means a total of 8,368 new rooms. During the period we have lost only the Windsor Clifton, the Stratford and the old Palmer House and Bismarck hotel.

"Many of the new hotels on the near north side and practically all of those along the north and south lake front were built since 1920. A recent survey indicated we have a total of 59,000 hotel rooms, 24,000 apartments and more than 350,000 other rooms to rent in Chicago."

The Chicago Stadium, 1800 W Madison-st, where the convention will be held, was built in 1929. It comfortably seats 25,000 persons and has a refrigerating system capable of keeping the temperature at 70 degrees. It is only eight minutes from the downtown section.

The Association of Commerce in making arrangements to accommodate the more than 1,000 newspapermen expected to attend the convention. As a first step, association members are making certain that adequate telegraph service will be available.

NEWS REPORT FROM THE OHIO BUREAU OF MOTOR VEHICLES

EARLY AUTO RECEIPTS

Estimated receipts from auto licenses for December this year are reported at well over six million dollars, by the Ohio Bureau of Motor Vehicles. This year is said to be far in advance of other years in early receipts. This is due to the fact that license plates went on cars December 10th, earlier than usual. Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown instructed his deputy commissioners to turn in their tag money as quickly as possible He did this to provide quick distribution of the revenue to the points of registration in order to supply counties with funds to maintain and repair roads and thus aid the unemployment situation.

On the distribution of $1,603,088.61, the cities and counties receive $1,136,512.32 on the basis of motor population, while $78,925.68 goes to the 88 counties, divided equally. To the state $387,650.55 for maintenance and repair of highways

NO EXTENSION OF TAGS

There will be no extension of time for the use of 1931 auto tags beyond December 31, Chalmers R. Wilson, commissioner of the Motor Vehicles Bureau, has announced. The policy of the bureau of demanding that cars bear the license plates of the new year on January 1, and thereafter, will be enforced, it was indicated

The matter was brought to an issue this week by bus companies who solicited an extension of time. Commissioner Wilson refused to yield on the grounds that no discrimination will be made. As a result several of the bus companies indicate that some of their big passenger vehicles will be withdrawn from use for the first quarter of the new year

HIGHWAY PROGRAM

The program announced by the department of highways, represents a reduction of approximately $6,000,000 from the estimated cost of 1931 improvements but does not include $3,500,000 of the 1932 funds used in bridge building this winter to aid the unemployed.

Improvements and construction in 1932 will cover 854.10 miles of highways, or about 300 miles less than in 1931.

One-sixth of the total fund will be used to improve the National Road across the state.

Receipts from auto licenses and gasoline tax make Ohio's stupendous road program possible from year to year. This year great effort is being made to get these receipts into official channels, as promptly as possible, to help meet the unemployment situation throughout the state.

The let down in industry found him calling the industrial leaders to his side, winning pledges for speeding private improvements that the loss of labor might be lessened to the working classes. He has made a heroic effort to maintain existing wage levels and whenever calm judgment is passed upon his career, this will be one of his outstanding accomplishments Wherever wage levels have been maintained, it has been due to Herbert Hoover.

The president's contribution to the relief of Europe, a feat which saved America's commerce with the rest of the world, is of recent date. The postponement of international debt payments, in which the president secured the hearty co-operation of an overwhelming majority of Congress, rescued Germany from bankruptcy and Europe from chaos.

STORM AT END

As 1931 ends, our nation is passing through the aftermath of an economic storm, the like of which the world has never seen. Other governments have fallen; ours emerges serene and impregnable The unjust criticism hurled at the noble figure in the White House will pass with the storm. The American people, who come to the truth in the end, will hail him eventually as one of the heroic men of our era, a master of destiny who guided America safely and successfully through the greatest crisis in our history.

Miller nor Pearse revealed what the specific charges in the letter were, but P. L. A. Lieghley, assistant prosecutor, said his office would not make public Barton's letter unless the dead man's relatives approved. The letter written by Barton was marked "for publication."

"If this note is authentic, its publication would result in a scandal in the state prohibition department," Coroner Pearse said.

WOMEN INVOLVED

Among other things, it was learned, the letter charged that other dry agents were as guilty as he in the incident which resulted in his dismissal but that he was "made the goat." The particular part of the letter being suppressed by the Cuyahoga County officials was reliably reported to contain charges involving "two state senators" and other "high officials," their use of liquor and their conduct with certain women.

Part of the letter's contents were revealed by Richard Ruffin of Chihuahua, Mexico, who accompanied the former dry agent from Columbus to Cleveland Tuesday by bus. He said the letter charged that numerous state dry agents drank liquor and that it claimed Barton had not been given a fair hearing by Mathews.

CHARGES AGENTS

Barton made charges against fellow agents at the time of his hearing, but failed to substantiate them Mathews added.

The dismissed agent spent Christmas with his wife and six children in Sidney. He seemed worried, Mrs. Barton said, and left home after the holiday without saying where he was going.

On the bus trip to Cleveland, Barton expressed an intention to kill himself, Ruffin said. The latter accompanied the despondent man to the hotel and took a room nearby.

Ruffin said he visited Barton later and thought the latter had abandoned his intention to commit suicide. The former dry agent finally asked the visitor to bring in some food and a newspaper.

After Ruffin left, hotel employes heard two shots and found Barton dead. He had shot himself with a .38-caliber revolver, Coroner Pearse said. Barton was 40 years old.

HAD PICKAWAY

For several months he had been chief of liquor enforcement in Franklin, Union, Madison, Pickaway, Fairfield, Licking and Delaware counties. He was dismissed Dec. 18 by Mathews on a charge of drinking and possessing liquor. The dismissal had been upheld Wednesday by Governor White shortly before Barton shot himself.

Barton, who formerly had been a school teacher, was first appointed to a position in the state prohibition department last July by the late Clarence Sears, then head of the department. After serving a month he was laid off as an economy measure. In the fall, when George Baynham of Columbus was dismissed from the dry staff, Barton was appointed to Baynham's place.

Mathews dismissed Barton after he had found "considerable liquor" in the latter's possession in a Columbus hotel room [illegible] ago. Barton, at the time, was in Columbus to testify before a federal grand jury in a liquor violation inquiry. At the time, Mathews said, Barton made charges against several dry agents but failed to substantiate them

At the time of his dismissal, Mathews said, Barton made threats that he would "expose everything." Previously, however, charges made by Barton had proved unfounded, Mathews said.

Wilmington College Team Meets Club Squad

IZE MAY PLAY PART IN CONTEST

When Joe Lynch, coach-manager of the Circleville Athletic Club basketball team, scheduled the Wilmington college varsity team for a game here New Year's night he planned to give Circleville and Pickaway-co court fans a real treat and that is just what is expected at the local gym Friday night when the crack college team meets the club tossers.

The lineups are expected to be read as follows:

C. A. C.		Wilmington
Steele	F	Darkin
Parks	F	R. King
Pickens	C	Irvin
Gordon	G	Jacoby
Merriman	G	Apking

Referee, Leo Uridil, Ohio State.

The work of Uridil in the Cambridge game last week was highly commended and immediately Manager Lynch booked him to return for the New Year's game.

The ability of the Wilmington cagers is well known. T hey are reputed to be fast, good passers and dead shots at the net, so if Joe Lynch's crew is going to stand a chance each member of the squad must be in excellent condition to go four hard quarters.

Darkin and Irvin, forward and center, are two fast court men. The former is the 'feeder' of the team passing to King and Jacoby numerous times he might have a shot himself. Dakin also rings up lots of points of the Steelemen. Irvin, six feet three inches tall, plays the pivot position, alternating at a guard with Jacoby.

The preliminary will see the Flying Clouds defeated in a hectic game by Kingston last week, tangling with the Epworth league team of the Methodist church Several high school athletes play with the league team.

The preliminary is scheduled to begin at 7 15 p. m.

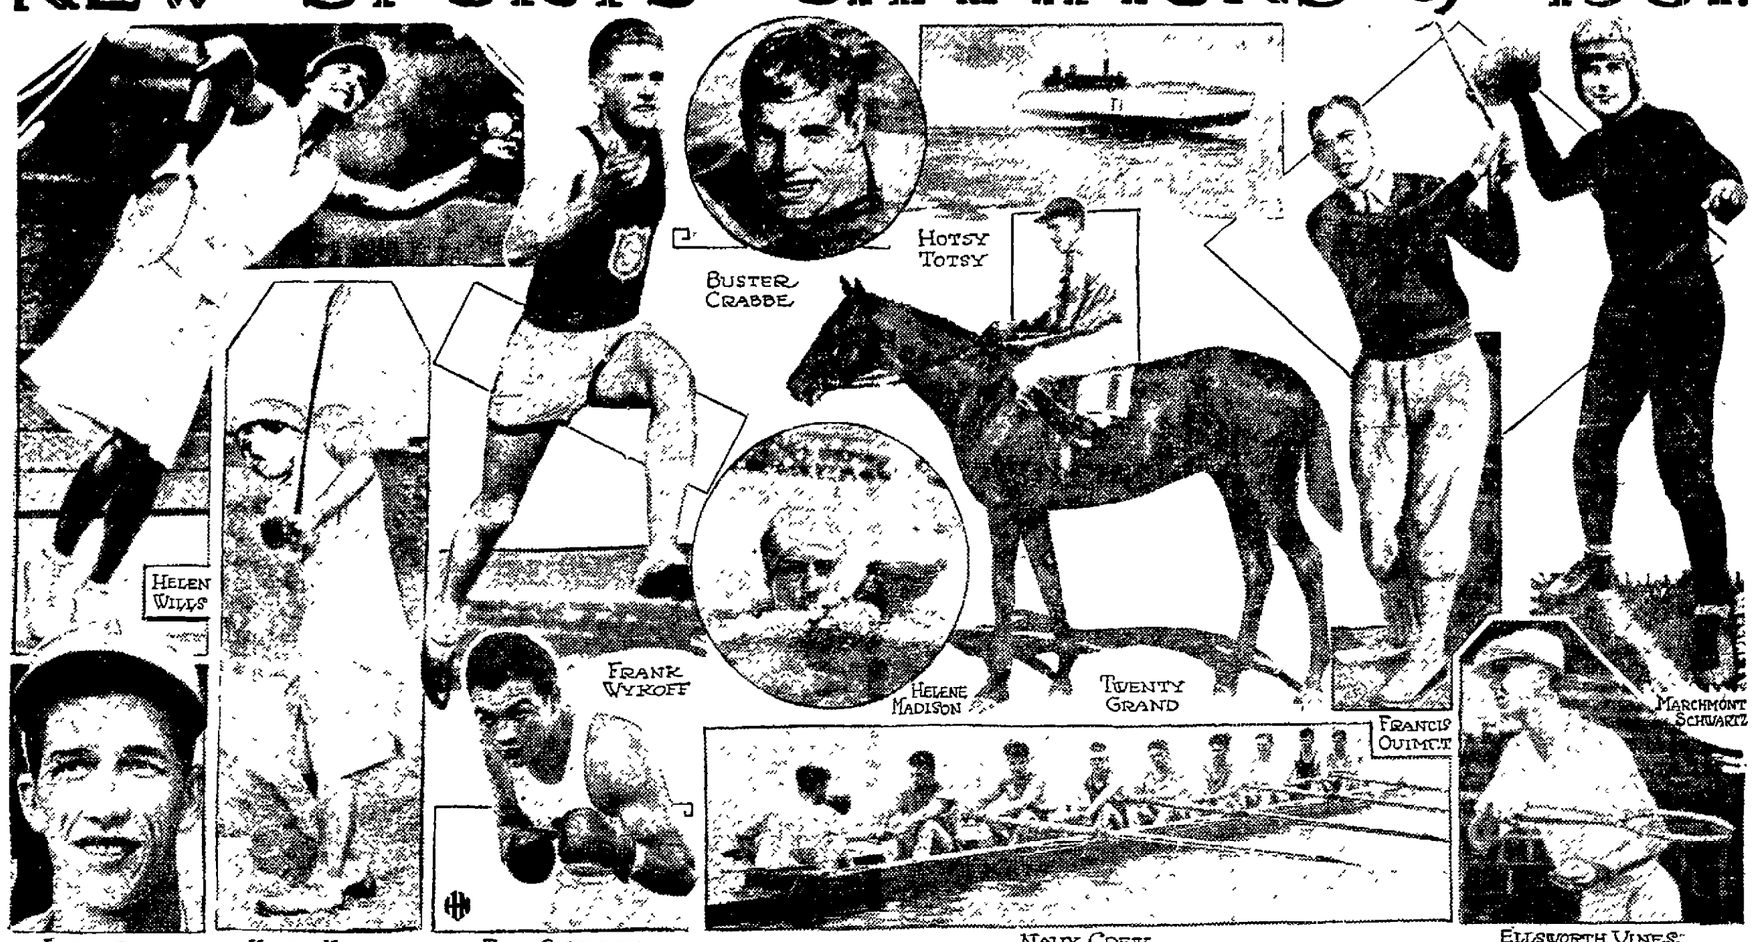

Dancing will follow the basketball game

NEW SPORTS CHAMPIONS of 1931.

As 1931 sinks towards the limbo of other back numbers in the calendar, it is interesting to review how it figures in the history of sports and what champions it brought forth to add to the list of former years. On the tennis courts, Helen Wills Moody, who allowed her title to go undefended in 1930, came back in '31 and regained her crown in a blaze of glory. The real tennis sensation of the year, however, was 19-year-old Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Cal., who battered his way through a phalanx of veterans to win the men's title. On the links, the Women's National Championship was captured by 20-year-old Helen Hicks, and Francis Ouimet, battle-scarred veteran, made a glorious comeback to recapture the men's national amateur title that he first won back in 1914. In the water, Clarence Crabbe, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, took the National Swim Championship, smashing the half-mile free-style mark with a record of 10 minutes and 20.4 seconds. The Queen Mermaid for 1931 is Helene Madison, of the Washington A. C. of Seattle, who makes a hobby of setting new marks. Frank Wykoff, of California, is undisputed sprint king of the world, his record of .09 2-5 for the 100-yard dash marking him as the fastest runner in the history of the world. Football's outstanding hero of the year is generally conceded to be Marchmont Schwartz, of Notre Dame, and baseball produces as its shining light "Lefty" Grove, of the Philadelphia Athletics. The undisputed champion of four-legged athletes is Twenty Grand, who won eight of his ten races during the season, among them the Kentucky Derby, bringing in $218,545 in prize money. The boxing ring magnate can laude goes to Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion who improves with every battle in defense of his title. The Navy crew gets the honors in the rowing world by virtue of its brilliant victory in the intercollegiate championship at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the Hotsy-Totsy gets the laurels for power boats by its conquest in the Gold Cup Regatta at Montauk Point. Taken by and large, 1931 has not done so badly for sport. The performances of our athletes inspire confidence that Uncle Sam will retain the Olympic title at Los Angeles next Summer.

WILLIAMSPORT AND CLARKSBURG FIGHT

Clarksburg basketball teams came out victorious Tuesday night in a triple-header played at Clarksburg. Clarksburg high school alumni girls defeated the Chillicothe Merchant girls 23-5 in the opener while the Clarksburg Merchant boys defeated the Williamsport Independents 32-28 and the Atlanta Independents 32-10.

The feature attraction of the evening was the game with Williamsport. It was one of the fastest and most thrilling ever played at Clarksburg. Clarksburg took the lead during the second quarter when they ran up a total of 14 points to but one for Williamsport. The visitors outscored Clarksburg during the second half and came within a few seconds of defeating the home town boys with a thrilling last quarter rally.

Battalino Earns New Respect of Fans

NEW YORK.—When Battling Battalino fights Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight crown, the fans will view "Bat" with a new respect as a result of his quick knockout over Al Singer in his last important bout.

Battalino, however, does not agree with those who talk of his "overnight transformation" from a mauler into a knockout.

"I broke both my hands when I won the featherweight title from Andre Routis in 1929," he points out, "and up until a couple of months ago I didn't dare hit hard The bones in both hands were dislocated so badly that Dr Fralich, who treated me, had to take no less than 114 stitches in them.

"I had to nurse my hands along for nearly two years. They hurt after ever fight. A few months ago they seemed to be O.K. So I didn't pull any punches against Earl Maestro and dropped him three times.

"That slugging didn't hurt my dukes, so I hit as hard as I could in my next scrap, against Bushy Graham, and flattened him in one round. When I faced Singer I knew by hands were in perfect shape and had no trouble in putting him away in two rounds."

WEIGHT A SURPRISE

Battalino was quite a hitter before he broke his hands on Routis. He knocked out four men in less than eight minutes in winning the national amateur featherweight championship in 1927.

New York boxing writers haven't yet recovered from the surprise Battalino handed them when he weighed in for the Singer fight T he featherweight champion had weighed in at less than 126 pounds five weeks before, and it was estimated he would tip the scales at about 128 to 134 for Singer

The scribes wrote reams of copy speculating as to whether Battalino, a "good little man" could whip Singer, a "good big man" Imagine their embarassment when "Bat" weighed in at 135 1-2 nearly two pounds more than Singer

BUCKEYES READY FOR VANDERBILT

COLUMBUS, O, Dec 31—A grim determination to avenge a gridiron defeat gripped the Ohio State basketball cagers here today as they anxiously awaited tonight's game at the coliseum against Vanderbilt. Another urge for victory was the desire to inaugurate the Big Ten season in January with a spotless record

Coach Harold Olsen concluded the practice sessions last night with a brisk workout, the varsity being led by Bobby Colburn, former Dayton Stivers athlete Colburn, a sophomore who made such an impressive showing in his collegiate debut against Yale, was certain to start tonight's battle. Fred Conrad, another sophomore, of Wooster will hold down the pivot post with Captain Joe Hoffer of Youngstown and Howard Mattison of Erie, Pa., in the guard berths.

Olsen however, is puzzled by the remaining forward position. Herb Brown and Ed Ryan, both of Dayton, have alternated during the early season games, but now Johnny Fugitt, a second year man from Portsmouth who has recovered from a football injury, has shown exceptional ability Olsen failed to reveal who he would start against the southerners

Vanderbilt, co-captained by Bill Schwartz, a former Lakewood, O., boy has five letter-men available. Their experience is likely to offset the speedy floor work and scoring ability of the Buckeye sophomores

STREAM CLOSING NOW CLEARED UP

Misunderstanding regarding the status of the Scioto River, following an announcement by W. H. Reinhart, state conservation commissioner, that 4,000 miles of rivers and streams in Ohio will be closed to permit restocking with fish, is cleared up by E. L. Wickliff of the state conservation department who drew up the stream closing plan. This was announced at a meeting of the conservation council Wednesday when it proved the stream closing plan

He points out that the main of course of the Scioto River and away-co will be open to fishing. The river will be closed only in the upper reaches of its headwaters

Salt Creek and Deer Creek are the two streams in this county which will be closed to fishing during the next year

Big and Little Walnut and Big and Little Darby will remain open to fishing during the next year but will probably be closed in 1933 to permit restocking

Farmers owning land on closed streams can not fish lawfully it was brought out at the meeting Wednesday.

PETROLLE IN FORM

NEW YORK Dec. 31.—Billy Petrolle, the battle-scarred veteran from Fargo, N D, who in the past has drubbed such good fighters as Jimmy McLarnin, Tony Canzoneri and Justo Suarez, is on the warpath again.

Last night at Madison Square Garden the old Fargo Express ran over Billy Townsend, slugging Canadian from Vancouver, who was considered one of the brightest prospects in the welterweight division.

The youthful Townsend was literally slaughtered. Petrolle dropped him four times with his famous left hook After 1 minute and 58 seconds of the second round, the Canadian was so far gone that Referee Willie Lewis awarded the fight to Petrolle on a technical knockout.

Republican national committee first proclaimed the superman's return from immortality but the people were aware of the fact long before. Now all the world realizes the nominal head of the Republican party no longer retains even the confidence of his party followers, not even of his own spokesmen in Congress and least of all, the confidence of that great mass of independently-minded citizens.

The record of the Republican party in 1931 has been one of vacillation, postponement, evasion and delay, when great national problems, such as unemployment, economic distress, starvation or a banking crisis, confronted the administration, it called upon the citizens to help themselves. An eager Congress, which might have created legislative remedies, was left to wander about on a nine months' vacation, while conditions grew worse.

When the Congress did convene, it was met with phrases and empty words. It was peculiarly characteristic of the administration that in all the tens of thousands of words sent to Congress, there was no mention of feeding the hungry unemployed—no relief suggested for the man, whose family suffers, while he walks the streets in search of work.

With factories idle, mills closed, workmen discharged, it was again peculiarly characteristic of the administration that there was no mention of the tariff—that great economic barrier, which keeps America from its normal commerce with the rest of the world and has brought economic chaos to Europe.

The year 1931 has destroyed confidence in the Republican party; the year 1932 will bring the Democratic party into power. A Democrat will be elected president next November.

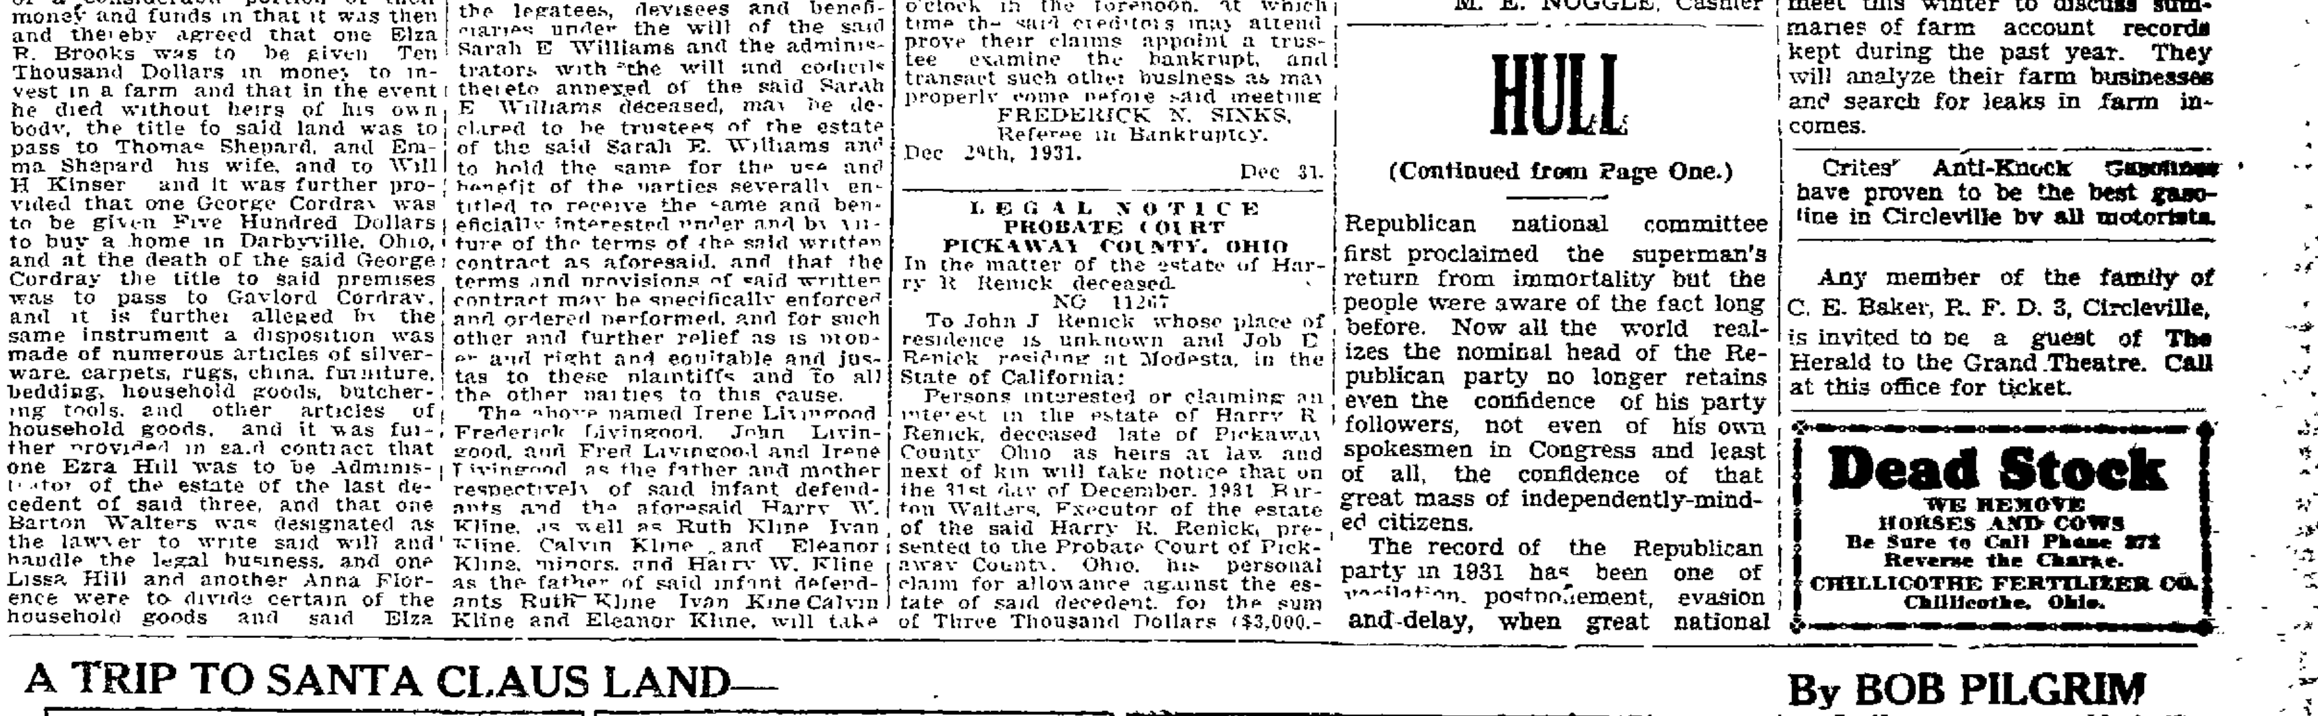

Farmers in practically every county in the state are planning to meet this winter to discuss summaries of farm account records kept during the past year. They will analyze their farm businesses and search for leaks in farm incomes.

Overshadowed

CONSIDER the meek, unimportant little woman who as widows blossom forth plump and pink and pulchritudinous. Not because they care little for their late husbands or because they are out to catch others, but simply because they cannot fail to flourish on more air and nourishment.

Consider the husbands, who when their wives are off an vacation, spruce up and become the life of any party to which they are invited. Not because they do not adore their wives, but because they have more room to breathe.

Consider the younger men who rise to fill successfully the shoes of retired executives. Not because they suddelny have acquired new telent, but because the talents they possess are permitted to expand.

Many a younger sister has profited by the transplantation, through marriage, of an elder sister; many a weak brother has acquired new vigor and deeper roots through the departure of a brother who overshadowed him.

It is common knowledge among all students of plant life that beds and borders should not be permitted to become overcrowded. The wise gardener devotes many hours to thinning out his plants and separating his bulbs so that each may have more air and nourishment.

But it is less common knowledge that the same principle applies to human beings. Many men and women are pot-bound and do not know it. Too many fail to realize that the person or organization they are clinging to is getting more than half the norishment and sunshine.

CHAPTER LI

Martin had known that Wynter was becoming suspicious—but that he knew so much, enough to have singled out those four names, had come as a staggering revelation. It was as though an abyss had suddenly opened at his very feet. Only was Wynter in a position to prove anything after all? Might not his words be merely bluff, an empty threat to trick him into giving himself away? Martin's panic thoughts were a confused whirl. He could not be sure. He stood shaken, irresolute, but still silent.

The casual voice went on:

"It may interest you to know that Scotland Yard is already in possession of all the facts of that deliberate attempt to shoot me two nights ago——"

"But that was all a mistake," broke in Martin desperately. "Frome only fired to scare off trespassers," as we thought, we never dreamed it was you, sir. I explained all that——"

"Martin, until you can think out a more convincing lie, hadn't you better leave 'explanations' alone?" Jim said wearily "Listen to this: 'What does that interfering fool Wynter suspect? We've got to stop him, Frome, before he finds out anything to make him dangerous.' Your own babblings to Frome on that night, Martin—I was in earshot as you spoke them. Can you think out a good lie to explain them away?"

Martin's face looked ghastly in the faint misty light

Jim's voice suddenly changed to menace.

"Do you think it was an idle threat when I said the machinery is already being set in motion? We know about that forged letter that brought me down here that night . . . we know about that deliberately blocked underground door . and we know Mr. Severn was made a prisoner because he had found out too much for his own safety. And the murder of Creyke at Monksilver——"

Martin broke in half-hysterically: "But I was here at Beggar's Court all that night. I can prove I was nowhere near Monksilver!"

"Better keep your voice lowered, Martin, for your own sake! You may have been at Beggar's Court, but can you prove you weren't an accessory to that murder, with Sant, Martell and Frome? There's a popular air, by the way, that Frome has a trick of whistling—I heard him whistle it that night at Monksilver. That trick of his may hang Frome yet!"

Martin seemed to given a sudden little shiver.

"Better decide quickly, Martin, before the hand falls that's already stretching out to strike It isn't that I'm anxious to spare you, my man, or think you ought to be spared—only I offer you this chance in return for information about Mr Severn. I'm on the telephone at Manorways. Think it over and ring me up."

Jim heard distant approaching footsteps behind them, to make Martin glance 'round with a nervous start. Martell returning from his fruitless search of the grounds.

"One other thing, Martin," Jim added, as those footsteps drew nearer. The whispered voice was like steel. "If you breathe a word of what I've said to those accomplices of yours. God help you. Now what about getting this hood up?"

The two men were busy adjusting the hood of the car as Martell came up, he seemed to glance as if suspiciously from Jim to Martin Martell's face had more than a hint of strain. He at least could not know yet that he had been hunting for an imaginary Frank Severn.

"No luck, I suppose?" Jim said "Hopeless, of course, in this mist, as we found it."

He turned to go back to the house. Martell lingered behind for a moment to speak to Martin. Almost certainly the manservant had snatched the opportunity of telling him what Sant had already discovered that Severn had not escaped. For as Martell followed Jim into the hall his face could not hide a sudden unmistakable relief

"Had a fruitless search for your friend I'm afraid," said Isham as he and Martell were introduced I couldn't offer to help, of course, with only one sound leg to hobble on!"

In an instant, forgetting his professed lameness, forgetting his crutches, he had sprung to his feet.

"That's hard luck," said Martell.

The talk drifted to desultory topics, but a certain constraint seemed to pervade it. That both Sant, usually so fond of hearing his own voice, and Martell seemed to be in a preoccupied mood hardly surprised Jim What both men knew now to have been a trick played on them by some unknown person must have been, not only mystifying, but more than a little disquieting

A trick behind which might lie a definite warning of danger.

It was Isham who brought the talk back to Severn. He was leaning back in a deep arm chair, his crutches by his side, the steel-gray eyes of the thin cynical face thoughtfully watching the smoke spirals from his cigaret.

"That chap dashed past me in he grounds, going hell for leather." he said abruptly. "It seems damned queer, don't you think, that Severn, after giving the slip to his enemies, should bolt like mad from his friends? Can anyone suggest a reason?"

The reason was obvious, of course, to at least four out of the six there But of those four, who knew now what Isham presumably did not know, each had a motive for keeping up the pretence that the fugitive had been Frank Severn. No one answered.

"Now if this were merely a thrill-story, not real life, how easily one could find a convincing reason! That scriptural phrase, 'A man's foes are they of his own household'—I should use that to supply the clue to my thriller," Isham went on with smiling lightness—and Jim was suddenly conscious of a quickening of tension in the atmosphere, saw the eyes of Sant and Martell fasten on the speaker "Well, this would be my explanation. Severn, glancing in at the window, recognizes suddenly among those there all supposedly his friends, the faces of secret treacherous enemies——"

Sant's face had gone colorless He half started up in his chair.

"What the hell do you mean by that" he broke out

Isham seemed surprised at the sudden vehement outburst He said with a deprecating shrug.

"Sorry, Mr Sant—you aren't assuming I was literally on a mild joke. I merely suggested as a dramatic solution for such a situation in a story. You can hardly suppose I meant so fantastic an explanation seriously!" Isham laughted, imperturbably cool

Sant dropped back into his chair.

"Perhaps our ideas differ as to what is a fit subject to joke about," he said stiffly

To Jim Wynter Isham's words had brought a swift startled thrill. He had suddenly realized that under their playful guise, they were very far from being a lightly spoken jest: veiled but deliberate challenge! And clearly Sant and Martell, their eyes smouldering with sudden brooding suspicion, were not blind to that underlying meaning.

And that scriptural phrase about "A man's foes:" the same phrase had occurred in the first of those two anonymous letters. . . .

For Jim it was a swift revealing moment, so much had suddenly been made clear

That unknown shadow in the background, the writer of those two letters—John Isham!

Not an accomplice, but a secret enemy working in the dark against this sinister circle at Beggar's Court—John Isham!

The man who had masqueraded tonight as Severn—John Isham!

"What's happened to your sense of humor, Sant?" laughed Bill. "A darned ingenious solution I call it —for a suppositions situation in a thrill story as Mr. Isham explained "

"Of course, I had thought I made that quite clear," said Isham evenly. He blew a smoke ring, evidently unruffled by his host's frowning displeasure.

"After Mr Sant's rebuke, I daren't mention a theory I have—a fanciful one this time—about another phase of this mystery," he added.

"What's that?" asked Jim.

"Oh, as to why Creyke was murdered at Monksilver—and who they were, those men guilty of that cold-blooded crime," he said slowly.

The atmosphere in the room had suddenly become tense again; Jim, startled and puzzled, was very conscious of it. Was Isham deliberately playing on the nerves of Sant and Martell? Through the heavy silence came a sharp intake of breath from Helen Blair, her face dead white.

It was Isham who suddenly saw the girl's eyes close, the slender figure in the chair swaying limply forward In an instant, forgetting his professed lameness, forgetting his crutches, he had sprung to his feet caught the fainting girl in his arms as she was falling forward to the floor

"Check-ups" Aid Health of Child

Periodic Examinations Advised to Safeguard Children.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MOTHERS frequently write to ask if periodic health examinations are really important for their children. They cannot understand why a perfectly healthy child should be taken to a doctor.

Dr Copeland

It is important for children as well as for adults. When everybody realizes this, there will be an improvement in the general health. Such diseases as rheumatism, heart disease, kidney disease and many other disorders are checked if discovered early.

Many diseases are slow in action. It may be many years before they cause actual pain or discomfort, yet they may have been progressing for a long time

In children this problem is even greater than in adults Often children continue with their play and the eating of their food as if nothing had occurred

During its infant stage a mother is interested in the weight and progress of her child She is eager to learn whether the measurements of the head, chest and abdomen are normal.

As the child grows older, and to all external appearances is healthy, the mother is apt to be less alert Visits to the physician become less and less frequent This is a mistake, because medical attention continues to be important

The posture of the child should be observed. Faulty posture should be set right. Disturbances in nutrition which cause knock-knees, bowlegs or even flat feet, if detected at an early age, can be corrected.

Another problem which has received too little consideration in children is that of blood pressure High blood pressure is seldom found in children, but low pressure is a common symptom. When it is discovered and early treatment is given these frail, undeveloped children develop into sturdy, healthy individuals

Examination of the urine gives information concerning inflammatory conditions which may exist in the kidney, or elsewhere in the urinary tract. It may also point to chronic digestive disturbances This examination also determines whether or not the child is drinking sufficient water.

I have heard many a mother say that her child is anemic. She makes this statement because the child appears pale Examination of the blood is the only way to be sure about it. There are other disorders too that can be determined by a blood examination

X-ray pictures are particularly important to determine some facts about children By their use it is possible to visualize certain disorders in the body which otherwise might be overlooked

I hope that I have given you sufficient reasons why periodic examinations are of value to the child Please remember the object of such an examination is merely to take inventory of your child's health I may locate some minor disorder which is easily and quickly cured

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

Joe E. Brown, one of the most popular comedians of the screen, comes to the Cliftona Theatre tomorrow in his latest First National comedy, "Local Boy Makes Good."

Brown, who has indulged in athletic pictures of many sorts, including football, baseball and boxing, is a track man in "Local Boy Makes Good," and wins laurels for his college—and his family—as a sprinter, putting the usual number of typical Brown effects into his athletic efforts.

"Local Boy Makes Good," which is based on a play by J. C and Elliott Nugent was directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Among the supporting cast are many favorites including Dorothy Lee, Edward Woods, Ruth Hall, Wade Boteler, Edward J. Nugent, William Burress and John Harrington.

Mr. Brown's big local following will be agreeably surprised by the human quality of "Local Boy Makes Good"—which does not depend on slapstick for its appeal. Joe provides the laughs—but in a different way. It's his best picture to date, he declares

AT THE GRAND

In one of the most sensational acts of its kind, Betty Cooper, Circleville's most noted young actress, will perform at the midnight show tonight at the Grand Theatre.

The act that will be seen tonight is entirely new, in fact it is the first time she has appeared in public with the act, and to miss seeing her flip-flopping up and down stairs would be missing the best show of this year.

At last an ideal picture. There have been football pictures and there have been college pictures, but there never was either a football picture or a college picture which contained the genuine thrill, legitimate heart interest, honest-to-goodness college atmosphere and solid enjoyment of "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Everyone who had a hand in making this picture put his entire heart in it because it was made as a memorial to the late Knute Rockne, the best loved and most famous character that American football has developed. Lew Ayres is the star, and never since "All Quiet" has he had a picture which so thoroughly suited his remarkable talents.

In addition to a cast which includes William Bakewell, J. Farrell McDonald, Sally Blane, Harry Barris and Nat Pendleton, it has the tremendous advantage of the Four Horsemen in person, talking, acting, playing, and of Frank Carideo, twice All-American quarterback, and fourteen famous Notre Dame football stars. For a good, clean, thrilling, blood-tingling entertainment, "The Spirit of Notre Dame," which will be shown at the Grand Theatre on Thursday will rank as one of the greatest pictures of 1931.

AT THE CIRCLE

Every important member of the cast of "Bulldog Drummond," the mystery thriller which Samuel Goldwyn brings to the Circle Theatre on Thursday with Ronald Colman as star, is an actor of considerable stage experience.

Colman himself was a prominent juvenile on the English stage before coming to the United States and got his first chance in pictures after Henry King, the director, saw him in a New York production and signed him to play opposite Lillian Gish in "The White Sister." Joan Bennett, who plays the leading feminine role opposite him is making her first appearance in films, having recently completed playing in "Jarnegan" on Broadway with her father, the famous Richard Bennett Lilyan Tashman, the blonde temptress of the picture, began her stage career as one of Florenz Ziegfeld's glorified show girls. Montagu Love and Lawrence Grant are both well-known American stage actors in character specialties and Claude McAllister, playing Algy Longworth, Bulldog Drummond's bosom friend, played the same role in the days when "Bulldog Drummond" was the stage hit of London.

DARBY-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

The P T A. program was attended by a large crowd last Friday night. A question box was one of the features of the program and proved to be very interesting and in many instances helpful. Many of the parents took part in the discussions. The theme contest was won by William Erskine. This contest was about the "Behavior at our P. T. A. Meetings" and was a fine way of calling the attention of the younger people to the fact that sometimes the attention at the meetings was not what it should be.

Mr. Morris, state high school inspector, and Co. Supt. Buchanan paid us a visit last Friday. Mr. Morris left the impression that he will probably make some recommendations in his report to the Board of Education. Both men gave very interesting talks in chapel.

The superintendents of the county at their regular meeting last Saturday in Supt. Buchanan's office decided to have a girls' basketball tournament in connection with the boys' tournament this year. The four best teams in the county will participate and will be selected according to percentage of games won during the season in regular interscholastic contests.

Both of our basketball teams lost their games at Monroe last Thursday night. The game for Dec. 23 with Scioto having been postponed, we will not have any more contest until Jan. 8 of next year which will be with Monroe here.

130 ATTEND BANQUET OF WASHINGTON GRANGE

An unusually charming affair was the banquet held in the Washington-twp school auditorium, Wednesday evening, when the losing side of a birthday contest that had been conducted in the Washington Grange No. 2240, entertained the winners.

One hundred and thirty grange members were seated at 6:30 o'clock at long tables centered with tall green tapers and white carnations. A color scheme of green and white was carried out in the decorations used throughout the room. Beautiful potted plants, arranged across the front of the stage, added to the attractive decorations.

After the serving of a delicious dinner, Marvin Steeley, as toastmaster, cleverly introduced the speakers and musical numbers on the program. Interesting talks were given by Mrs. Byron Bolender, Carl Bennett, T. M. Glick, H. S. Lewis, H. J. Briggs, George Marion and Kenneth Wertman. A vocal solo by Carl Brown and several piano selections by Dorothy M. Glick were delightful numbers.

Honorable mention was given D. C. Heffner, who has been worthy master for the past five years, and who is retiring at the beginning of 1932. During the five years that Mr. Heffner held this office 122 meetings were held all of which he attended. Kenneth Wertman will succeed Mr. Heffner as worthy master.

At the next meeting of the Grange to be held Friday, Jan. 8, officers will be installed.

Bell, Josie Kinser, Sadie Kinser, Mary Kinser, Frederick Livingood, John Livingood, Ruth Kline, Calvin Kline, Ivan Kline, and Eleanor Kline.

The petition states that on March 27, 1931 a certain paper purporting to be the last will and testament of Sarah E. Williams bearing date of Nov. 11, 1929, together with a first codicil bearing date July 10, 1930 and a second codicial bearing date July 18, 1930, and a third codicil bearing date January 27, 1931, were admitted in probate court and C. A. Leist and Charles H. May were appointed administrators with the will and codicils annexed.

The aforesaid paper supposed to be the last will and codicils of Sarah E. Williams are in truth and in fact not the last wills and codicils according to the petition, and it asks the court that an issue be made up as to whether said writings are the last will and codicils and that the same be set aside, and for such other relief as is proper.

All of the defendants must answer to the petition by Feb. 27, 1932.
